Artist Statement

Paint, text, lines, separations and overlaps are key to the work of Indi Jones. She communicates primarily through color as the outline. Panes of pigment are windows into her world and the images, words, and objects floating on, above or just under the panes are what she imagines the inside of our souls look like. Usually, a lonely figure will make its way into the work, looking for wings, or laundry, or a target to hit. More often than not, a larger than normal body part or object will make an appearance and the effect is generally humorous. The overlaps and separations are deliberate. The brief statements worked into wet paint are usually something her Mom said that is still part of the soundtrack of her mind. There is no clear method that one could pick out, but her work is distinctive and sensual and occasionally she feels like she gets it right.

Works owned by private collectors in Texas, Arkansas, South Carolina, Virginia, Iowa, and North Carolina. She also has a permanent installation at the Alzheimers Association of North Texas, located in Fort Worth, Texas.

Collector Quote

Indi is always surprised when someone takes an interest in her work. She uses many media to get her energetic point across, but continues to be astonished when anyone else gets it as well. Big blocks of pigmented color, under printed images topped off with text as a graphic element equals an exciting cohesive work that you want to keep looking at.
